

Adverbs of Manner

accidentally	gladly	regularly angrily	gracefully	reluctantly anxiously	greedily	repeatedly awkwardly	happily	rightfully badly	hard	roughly beautifully	hastily	rudely blindly	healthily	sadly boldly	honestly	safely bravely	hungrily	selfishly brightly	hurriedly	sensibly busily	inadequately	seriously calmly	ingeniously	sharply carefully	innocently	shyly carelessly	inquisitively	silently cautiously	irritably	sleepily cheerfully	joyously	slowly clearly	justly	smoothly closely	kindly	so correctly	lazily	softly courageously	loosely	solemnly cruelly	loudly	speedily daringly	madly	stealthily deliberately	mortally	sternly doubtfully	mysteriously	straight eagerly	neatly	stupidly easily	nervously	successfully elegantly	noisily	suddenly enormously	obediently	suspiciously enthusiastically	openly	swiftly equally	painfully	tenderly eventually	patiently	tensely exactly	perfectly	thoughtfully faithfully	politely	tightly fast	poorly	truthfully fatally	powerfully	unexpectedly fiercely	promptly	victoriously fondly	punctually	violently foolishly	quickly	vivaciously fortunately	quietly	warmly frankly	rapidly	weakly frantically	rarely	wearily generously	really	well gently	recklessly	wildly wisely

Adverbs of Manner strengthen verbs by giving us more information about how the action is performed.

She ate. (We know that she ate, but we don't know any more than that.)

She ate noisily. She ate angrily. She ate slowly. (We know much more.)